

ABSTRACT:

The present invention relates to a process for the preparation of polypropylene moulding compound which gives high impact and flexural strength to the moulded component which are extensively used in automobile industry.